I. Base of Contract

All our business-relations are submitted to our Sales-Conditions, accepted by our customer in the moment of ordering, even for future business, no matter of explicit reference as far as received in connection with any confirmed order. These Salesconditions even become valid if we receive an unconfirming order and even if we do not contradict such order expressly. Accordingly any deviation only becomes effective after our expressive written acceptance.

II. Offers and Agreements

Generally any of our offers are without legal effect, to be treated with discretion. Third companies may not base any legal effect out of them. Any conclusion of a single contract becomes effective just by our written confirmation of order. Open orders become effective by separate agreement or according to frame-agreements. Latter changes become effective only after written confirmation.

III. Prices

All prices are to be understood in currency EURO (€), „ex work“, net, exclusive VAT. If prices are agreed upon for longer term, we are entitled to ask at any moment for new price-negotiations, as far as increase in salaries, material or any other extraordinary increase may have occurred. Such also is consequence in case of increase of transport-costs due to change of shipping-points, especially to abroad, or any other change of costs of transport.

If such price negotiations result without mutually agreement, Nedschroef is entitled to stop any further delivery after a term of six weeks.

IV. Payment / Payment default

Payments are generally to be done 30 days after the date of invoice, net, without any deduction, by bank - transfer on that bank-account indicated on the related invoice. The date of disponibility is considered as date of payment. In case of payment default, we are entitled to set on hold any other delivery to this customer up to receipt of payment of all current claims. Thereover, in such case all current claims become due at once. This effect also occurs in case of customer's obviously bad financial conditions.

V. Terms of Delivery – Force Majeure

Delivery-dates and terms stated by us in offers or order-confirmations are only approximate and legally not binding as far as not exceptionally confirmed as binding in written form.

We are allowed to reject any delivery-schedules and related modifications during a term of 5 working-days after receipt. In cases of force majeure, production breakdown, operating trouble of machinery, fire, interruption of energy, strike of staff or similar we are free to interrupt contractual deliveries during the effect of such event. The customer is entitled to cancel it's order only after notification of a reasonable additional delivery-term.

Any claim of customer resulting from such event depends on our gross negligence or our act of intention Nedschroef's liability to special-transport-costs is limited to the triple amount of the value of the delivered goods excluded the case of late delivery due to Nedschroef's gross negligence or act of intention. 3. Thereover Nedschroef's liability concerning special transport-costs depends on customers compliance to additional obligations: Only such quantity may be transported, which is necessary to ensure customer's line-feeding up to receipt of goods transported by normal transport. The time frame of the fix planning depends on the production planning, procurement planning necessary for Nedschroef and planning of delivery. In urgent cases, such coordination must be done with our emergency-service. Provided that this should not be accessible, such coordination has to be done as soon as possible after beginning of rework / sorting.
